Maddy: “[No no, I’m just here for the free tea]” Emily: “[Why do you want to play though? We’re busy working on our silly detective game here]” Maddy: “[I’m enjoying it because I get to show off my own skills. And I’m having a blast as the murderer!]” [End Scene] Unexpected, eh? For those of you who want to see all of the scenes, we compiled the entire series here for you to watch. Though, it’s sort of a spoiler that way. Despite this, the full series could not have been pulled off without us. We’re incredibly thankful for all of the support and opportunities this series has gained us. If you are interested in this sort of project, you can request the files from Discord and/or Patreon (we are open to collaborating with others if they wish). Thanks again for all of your help and continued support. Twitter – @mynameisfattycakes Discord – Discord.gg Patreon – Patreon.com/fattycakes Email – emily@fattycakes.com

Wednesday, September 28, 2009 I'd Like To Win! That's what Good Luck Games is all about, and I'd love to invite you in on my journey. My first goal is to develop a basic understanding of digital games. The reason being that not many people have a clue as to how they work and the difference between a game and a toy. So I've teamed up with my daughter Melissa and we are putting together these quirky little things to answer the questions "What is a game?" "What is a toy?" "Why do we play?" and more. If you'd like to be a part of this adventure, and even if you don't, I'd appreciate your support. Here are the ways: Join my team by leaving a comment and tell me you're part of the Good Luck Games. (If I'm lucky and there are more than 20 responses I'll give away a mini ipad to one of the commentors). Grab a copy of the Good Luck Games Book on Amazon.com. I'll make a donation to Good Luck Games based on the number of 82157476af
